

Daily News Roundup

from the ASSOCIATION OF INDEPENDENT COLLEGES & UNIVERSITIES OF PENNSYLVANIA

November 29, 2016

With contract extension, Gutmann to become longest serving president in Penn's history

Amy Gutmann, president of the University of Pennsylvania, will remain in the job through June 2022 under a three-year contract extension that will make her the longest serving president in Penn's history. Gutmann, 67, became Penn's president in 2004 and was due to exit in 2019... - Philadelphia Inquirer

GCC president to address college's future

Grove City College President Paul J. McNulty will deliver a "State of the College" address announcing a new strategic vision that honors the college's past, recognizes the enormous challenges of today and builds for a strong and faithful future. McNulty will deliver the address at a luncheon beginning at 11:30 a.m. Dec. 14 at the Fairmont Hotel, Pittsburgh. - The Herald

Carnegie Mellon spinout gets $15M to expand machine learning

A Carnegie Mellon University spinout that wants to make it easier for businesses to use machine learning software has obtained $15 million in initial venture capital funding. - Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

Albright fashion students partner with local shop owners for holiday window competition

Albright College fashion students are teaming up with shop owners along Penn Avenue in West Reading for a festive holiday window display competition. - BCTV

From the classroom to the farm for students at Delaware Valley University

It's farm to table on the university level for some local students. Students at Delaware Valley University in Doylestown have found learning, delicious. They're growing the food and livestock, which ends up on the meal plan according to Scott Smith, the General Farm Manager. - CBS News \(Philadelphia\)

717.232.8649
www.aicup.org

unsubscribe from this list update subscription preferences

